Alternate Timelines

- 5 d The Enterprise encounters an anomaly at the Crossroads Nebula. and loses nearly five days of ship time. During this event, Tau Ceti III experiences a massive solar flare that destroys the Yoon civilization. Evidence supports that an outside agency may have been responsible for both events (TOS:71).

The Enterprise encounters the Nautilus, a three-hundred-year-old Constitution class vessel that travelled back through time through a Turtledove Anomaly within the Crossroads Nebula. The small handful of a crew on board include a deadly Yaggorth. They belong to the Shadow Fleet, a group of ragtag individuals fighting against the Consilium, a trading organization that saved the Federation from collapse during a deadly neurological plague. The cure was developed based on psionic wiring devices pioneered by Christine Chapel after leaving the Enterprise.

Although the wiring device halts the progression of the virus, it leaves individuals susceptible to suggestion, a side effect that the Consilium uses to direct Federation and Starfleet policy. The Consilium also deliberately spread the virus to the Romulan and Klingon Empires as well as other civilizations to bring them under their control. Furthermore, the Consilium also place wiring in newborn infants, inhibiting their developmental growth and delegating to the role of Secondaries aboard Consilium vessels.

The Shadow Fleet vessel came back in time to enlist the aid of the Yoondri before their world is destroyed and their people forced to serve the Consilium. Before they can accomplish their goal, a Consilium vessel under the command of Domina Germaine McKenna destroys the Yoon civilization by triggering a solar flare. With the aid of the Enterprise, the Nautilus manages to escape through the Anomaly. The Enterprise crew's memories of these events are erased by the Consilium ship's crew.

Romulan agents kill three Earth scientists whose work paves the way for the development of the Federation. As a result, Vulcan is the driving force for galactic unification, and form the Alliance, while Earth falls into a period called the Dark Times. Earth joins in exchange for technological advancement and its people are drafted into Starfleet. Ensign James Kirk is accused of murder at the academy and is subjected to the Talos device, which leaves him a broken man. Eventually he is assigned to the VSS ShiKahr under the command of Cptain Spock. Spock and Kirk become aware that their reality is an artificial construct as those whose minds reject this reality start to go insane. With the help of the Romulan Praetor, they travel back in time to stop the Romulan andropids from completeing their assignment and revert time back to its normal flow, causing their reality to cease.

Admiral Riker and Captain Wesley Crusher of the Hood attend the funeral of Lwaxana Troi on Betazed, bringing up the violent death of Deanna Troi years earlier. Riker discovers that Deanna was killed using a poison that had not yet been invented, and that her death was not a tragic accident but a result of a time-travelling assassin from his own time. Admiral Riker uses the Guardian of Forever to travel back in time and save Deanna's life, despite the attempt of the crew of the Enterprise-F under the command of Captain Data to stop him (TNG:Imz).
